Taken from in front of the Lace Mill, this 1962 picture shows the section of Main Street soon to be crossed by West Avenue. The white building on the left is Maurice Siegel's electrical supply store, which had to be demolished when West Avenue was extended north, and thereby became only the second road in Patchogue to cross Main Street.
