

A 1962 Jim Mooney aerial photo of the Patchogue railroad station, taken before the renovation. South Ocean Avenue is running across the bottom of the picture.

The station and parking lot in 1962. In the course of the next year the station building would be torn down and the parking lot modernized.

The end of the old 1889 station building came in May 1963. Here Mayor Waldbauer, operating the crane, takes the first bite out of the station roof.

The demolition is getting serious now.
