

The last steam engine train at the South Ocean Avenue crossing, November 26, 1967. This was a special train, an organized last steam trip for fans on the Montauk Line.

The local train service between Babylon and Patchogue, called 'Scoot', operated originally with steam engines, but was converted to diesel power in 1949. In 1955 a pair of R.D.C.'s (Rail Diesel Cars) took over this service for a few years.

A diesel powered train in 1970.
