"THE GREAT GALEOTO" IN PRODUCTION

Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry Leads

Some of the most elaborate Spanish settings ever seen on a studio lot have been put up at Culver City as a background for the production of "The Great Galeoto," which went into production last Wednesday under John Stahl's direction, with Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry in the leading roles. The distinguished supporting cast includes Edward Martin, George K. Arthur and Edward Connelly.

CAST COMPLETED

The complete cast of "The Understanding Heart," an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's new novel now under production for Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer, with Jack Conway directing, includes Joan Crawford, Ralph Bushman, Rockcliffe Fellows, Richard Carle, Harvey Clark, Carmel Myers and Jerry Miley.

AGNES C. JOHNSTON'S "THE NEWLY POORS"

An original screen story shortly going into production, entitled "The Newly Poors," by Agnes

ALICE TERRY

This most regal of screen stars is here seen wearing the magnificent bridal gown from "The Magician," Rex Ingram's (her husband) latest production. This exquisite creation was especially made for Miss Terry by the most expert lace workers in southern France, where Mr. Ingram has his studios. It is entirely plain, except for a single ornament in front, but the long train is of the most elaborate hand made lace.

Christine Johnston, widely known as one of the most successful film writers and now engaged on an adaptation of "Tillie, the Toller," for Marion Davies.

HUGHES TO PLAY OPPOSITE MAE MURRAY IN "VALENCIA"

Lloyd Hughes has been chosen to play opposite Mae Murray in a picturization of the song hit, "Valencia," which will be her next starring vehicle and the first film to be directed under his new contract by Dimitri Buchowetski. Hughes will play the role of a young sailor who falls in love with a Spanish dancer (Miss Murray). Roy D'Arcy has the role of the heavy.
