

A class picture shows the students in the fourth grade of the Maple Avenue School in 1915. The names of the students are listed from left to right as follows: {first row) Gladys Mathews, Tony Smith, Mary Ross, George Kane, Flora Lewis, Beacher Webb, and Hattie Conklin; {second row) Flora Shelbourne, Angelo Luca, Grace Bishop, Elbert Carter, George Andershok, Harold Keller, Winfield Corsten, and Beatrice Smith; {third row) Joel Mendelson, Malcolm Shand, Ernest Herod, Marion Shand, Frank Shaber, Clifford Dias, Arthur Ross, and Emily Alien; {fourth row) Hazel Ericson, Dencey Davis, William Berger, Henry Crowley, William Kern, and Sophie Grodeski; {standing) Henry Hallock, Clinton Duff, and Claude Smith.

A group of eight graders from Patchogue's three elementary schools are shown here in front of the Wilmot M. Smith School with the diplomas they had just received. Their names are as follows, although they are not in order: Marcelle DeMare, Lyle Hawkins, Ida Hulse, Laverne Quackenbush, Amy Conklin, Grace Baker, Robert Harrison, George Link, Clinton Nichols, Harold Hendrickson, Alfred Hurt, Lucille Cohen, Alma Ruland, Catherine McGregor, Marguerite Edwards, Annie Perkal, Frank Mayer, William Rogers, Herman Dederer, Beatrice Pasfield, Ambrose Pasfield, Esther Smith, Mildred Marran, Joseph Marran, Elizabeth Rowland, Effie White, Madeline Edwards, Robert Overton, Helga Reipert, Ella Terry, Bertha Misclivacek, Winniefred Edwards, Earl Gordon, Lilie Valentine, Bernadette Gerity, Sherman Coghlan, Elva Hatfield, Herman Schoenfeld, Guy Wieks, Mildred Conklin, David Hiscox, Humphrey Avery and Ruth Biggs.