

South Ocean Avenue on a beautiful summer morning in 1898. The lady with the horse and buggy is probably going shopping in Patchogue, and the jitney, possibly Mr. Overton's, is heading to the shorefront hotels. In the summertime, up to forty jitneys provided a taxi service between Patchogue and the hotels for a nickel a ride.

Another picture of East Main Street, taken from the "Four Corners." For the longest time Ocean Avenue was the only road crossing Main Street, creating the only four corners on Main Street, and so the name stuck to this day.
